

Two separate storms over the past five days have deposited up to 10" of snow around the Big Sky area. These two storms combined to equal 1.2" of SWE. Although the new snow is well bonded to the hard underlying ice crust, wind slabs remain a concern. Loose, wet avalanches will also be a concern when the sun comes out. Photo GNFAC

Advisory Region
Northern Madison

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Tue Apr 7, 2015GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Thu Apr 9, 2015

